textiles and in other branches the eagerness of buyers is regarded as forecast of a recovery in their advances, the growing scarcity of raw materials and products impelling urgent efforts to cover far distant requirements. Evidences of expansion are visible on every hand, but many manufacturers are cautious, with considerable judgment, in producing, and endeavor to repress demand rather than encourage it. Bills and credits are closely scanned. Obligations are generally not ever met with greater promptness than preliminary returns of October failures indicate the smallest mortality for the period since 1912, in spite of increase in new enterprises.
